SPRING MEDICINE

Is needed by nearly everybody to purify the blood, cleanse the system of the winter's accumulation of impurities, and put the whole body in good condition for the summer. Such universal satisfaction has given for this purpose that it is the most successful and most popular Spring Medicine. If you feel weak and tired, Hood's Sarsaparilla is just what you need to restore your strength and make you feel perfectly well.

The following is from Hon. W. S. Warner, a gentleman highly esteemed by all who know him:

"I can truly say that I consider Hood's Sarsaparilla the best medicine for purifying the blood. It did me good when physicians and other medicines failed. It has increased my appetite and seemed to renew my youth. This is absolutely true." W. S. WARNER, Fond du Lac, Wis.

Hood's Pills cure all Liver, Bile, Biliousness, Jaundice, Indigestion, Sick Headache.

"German Syrup"

Two bottles of German Syrup cured me of Hemorrhage of the Lungs when other remedies failed. I am a married man and, thirty-six years of age, and live with my wife and two little girls at Durham, Mo. I have stated this brief and plain so that all may understand. My case was a bad one, and I shall be glad to tell anyone about it who will write me. PHILIP L. SCHWENK, P. O. Box 45, April 25, 1890. No man could ask a more honorable, business-like statement.

Perfect Baby Health

ought to mean glowing health throughout childhood, and robust health in the years to come. When we see in children tendencies to weakness, we know they are missing the life of food taken. This loss is overcome by

Dr. Kilmer's SWAMP-ROOT

Saved His Life!
Doctors said I Could Not Live! POOR HEALTH FOR YEARS.

Mr. Wilcox is a practical farmer and Postmaster in the village where he resides, and is well known for miles around. He writes: "I had been in poor health for a long time. Four years ago the crisis came, and a number of our best physicians said I would not live a year. I began using Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, Kidney, Liver and Bladder Cure; then my doctor said it might help me for a time, but I would not be here a year hence. My difficulties, aggravated by Rheumatism, were so bad I could not get either hand to my face. I continued the medicine nearly a year, and now I am as well as any man of my age—sixty-eight years. I give Swamp-Root credit for saving my life, and the good health I now enjoy is due to its use."

COSTUMES FOR GIRLS.

The Flowing Sleeve and a Costume of Waterproof Silk.

HERE are three costumes drawn from those made for a wealthy family. One little girl of 11 had a gown made of wool crepon in brown of 10 shades. The lower sleeve and guimpe as well as sash were of real brown velveteen. The hat was cream straw, with ribbons and tips of the same shade. Her 13-year-old sister wore a frock of light heather mixture in the pale lilac purple, greens and browns found in that goods. There were three bands of velvet ribbon around the bottom, with bows and ribbon on the finely plaited blouse waist. The hat was an old military, of straw, with bow and plumes of heather color.

The little 7-year-old was going to a children's party, and she had a perfectly captivating little empire gown of shes of rose china silk with scalloped around the bottom with silk of the same grade. The little frock was high in the neck, with empire puffs on the short waist. The little gown is so easily to reproduce, as indeed are the other two, the mothers would be almost blamable who do not make a little frock like it. Other colors or materials would be as suitable, but nothing could be quaintier or prettier.

STYLISH BEST GOWN FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

A very handsome and dressy gown is shown here which is adapted to girls from 12 to 16 and is intended for a "best" frock. It was originally modeled in fine chaille, but is adapted for any seasonable material, including wash goods. The skirt is quite plain and gathered. The corsage is draped in simple style, but from left to right. The V front has a lace filigree, and lace also crosses the right side of the bust and reaches to the side line under the arm. The ribbon has one upstanding bow and loops, and the belt goes around the waist, which has plaits in the back from shoulder to point, and it buttons in the back with small round silk or metal buttons. The sleeves have double drooping puffs.

A gown shown in the third picture for a young lady is of mace colored cashmere, with a band of snuff brown fancy braid in two shades encircling the bottom and trimming the side of the skirt and the Spencer waist is an odd fashion. Over this is a jacket of beef blood velvet. The little girl has a frock of "beef blood" cashmere made without trimming with the exception of self drapery across the chest.

Among the new ideas in the way of making up dresses and coats there is a style of sleeve that borders closely on the old "flowing" sleeve. I have noticed it on several cloaks and coats, and a few outdoor and a few indoor dresses and show it now in a smart tea gown. The most of them are wider than this, but even this is a departure sufficiently notable from the close sleeves of the last few years.

Speaking of silks reminds me that there is an oriental waterproof silk which is only shown in different qualities of black. It is warranted to be just what it pretends—waterproof—and it will be a boon to travelers particularly. No one could tell from its appearance that it was in any way different from other silks, and so it will serve two purposes at once. It is not much dearer than ordinary silk. The skirt is plain demitasse, with a six-inch gathered flounce all around. The waist has a short point, and the lower part is covered with jet trimming. The draping on the bust represents a figure-eight. The upper part is filled in with pink silk muslin dotted with jet beads. The sleeves are exceedingly neat and trimmed with jet fringe. A bonnet to go with this is entirely of jet, so that dress and bonnet are waterproof, and the fair wearer could go through a storm with a smiling face. There is no smell of rubber to this silk, so I fancy the clever Japanese must have invented something else to render this silk waterproof.

A Canine Electrician.

Many people in Brighton, says a correspondent of an English paper, are interested just now in watching the clever work of "Strip, the electrician," who, after laying down many miles' length of copper wire for the purpose of electric lighting in London, has lately come here with the same object. "Strip" is a clever little fox terrier, the property of Messrs. Crompton, the electrical engineers, and she is under the protection of the company's night-watchman. Strip's method of doing work is as follows:—The workmen lay down in the desired position a short length of the short iron pipe which is to shelter a corresponding length of the copper wire along which the electric current will ultimately pass. The iron pipe having been fixed, Strip is called, has the end of the copper wire fastened to her collar and, at a sign, goes in at one end of the pipe and presents herself at the other end to the workman awaiting her there, who thrusts his hand under the bar, unfastens Strip's collar and draws it and the wire out. Strip, when she feels the collar gone, turns round, retraces her steps, comes out again at the same end she went in at, and lies down on the workmen's coats until she is wanted again.

A HORTICULTURIST says there is no plant so universally detested by the animal world as the castor oil plant, that even the goat will starve before biting of a leaf, army worms and locusts will pass it by, though eating every other green thing in sight, and there is no surer way to drive moles away from a lawn than to plant a few castor beans here and there.

A $7500 Handkerchief.

"Diamonds on pocket handkerchiefs!" "Yes, diamonds on pocket handkerchiefs," repeated the jeweler. "The very latest fad is the jeweled handkerchief. It's just come over from England."

The gems dealer was speaking to a Journal reporter whose attention had been called to an advertisement in a London paper, which read as follows:—

LOST—At the Queen's recent Drawing Room, a white lace handkerchief, with the initials M. worked in diamonds on the border. A liberal reward offered. Address Belgrave, office of this paper.

"It's astonishing," continued the jeweler, "how quickly a fad started in England takes root here. Although London has had the start of us, I reckon that before this time next year we shall be working more diamond initials on lace handkerchiefs on this side of the ocean in a week than the Britishers will in six months."

"How do you manage to fasten the diamonds on the lace?"

"First of all we strengthen that portion of the handkerchief where the initials are to go by several layers of fine linen, about the size of a postage stamp. Then we set the stones and attach them by means of thin gold wire."

These handkerchiefs are, of course, not intended for practical use. They are strictly ornamental affairs. If, in a moment of absent mindedness, a belle applied the be-diamond lace to her nose she would run the risk of scratching her skin with the stones, and so spoil her pleasure as well as her looks for a time.

The accompanying sketch represents an elaborately jeweled lace pocket handkerchief, costing $7500, and made to order for a rapid young New Yorker with a rich father.—New York Journal.

South American Vampires.

Ever since the South American continent was discovered, especially that part of it lying between the Amazon and the Orinoco Rivers, travelers have come from there with wonderful tales of the vampire, or, as they call them, blood sucking bats. As a fact, little is known about these pests. That there are blood sucking bats which feed not only on the blood of man, but also animals, is an undoubted fact, and though the writer himself has never been bitten by one, he has, while traveling in the interior of British Guiana, seen Indians and ponies that had undoubtedly been bitten by these bats.

In the case of a man attacked, the nose or the point punctured, while animals are liable to be bitten anywhere. How the bat does its work has not been made clear, for no man has yet awakened while being operated on by one of these bats, despite the fact that considerable blood is extracted, and more or less loss of blood takes place after the operation. It is probable that the bat hovers during the operation, rather than rests on the body. The rapid vibration of the soft wings probably also has a soothing effect on the part operated on.

The blood suckers belong to only two or three species and wherever these are found there are also many others whose food is only fruit or insects, or both. The most natural mistake about the bats, which are innocent of preying on man or beasts, is the common supposition that vampyrus spectrum is a blood sucker. The stretch of wings of this bat frequently reaches three feet, and it has a most ferocious aspect, with enormously large and pointed canine teeth. It is perfectly certain that in most parts of British Guiana this bat is only a fruit eater and is a serious pest to fruit growers.—New York Telegram.

Whistled Language of Canary Islands.

As a result of his studies of the whistled language of Gomera, in the Canary Islands, M. J. Lejard affirms that it is not a special idiom or a whistle which tries to imitate the Spanish language; but it is the Spanish language strengthened by the aid of whistling. "The Gomerman, while he is speaking, puts one, two, or four fingers in his mouth, as we sometimes see done in the street in order to make shrill sounds, and at the same time he whistles with force. There results a mixture of words and whistle, unintelligible to ears not accustomed to it, but in which can be distinguished the words of the language. The whistling, then, is only an artifice employed to carry to a distance the sound of the voice, to the detriment of its distinctness and tone quality. This last inconvenience is so great that up to this time travelers have been unable to understand the whistled language. To be able to understand it, you must know how to whistle yourself." It is, however, very limited in its compass, and whistled conversations are of short duration. It exists in other of the Canary Islands than in Gomera, and there is reason for believing that it was formerly more widespread and more prevalent than now. Rudiments of a whistled language, the mechanism of which is like that of the Canaries, exist even in Paris; it is employed by butchers and thieves.—Popular Science Monthly.

All Results of Early Rising.

A German doctor has discovered that the majority of the people who live long sit up late at night. Eight-tenths of the people who reach eighty never (so he says) go to bed until the small hours and take care not to get up until the day is well aired. Not only is it a very fine thing to go to bed late, but it is correspondingly dangerous to get up early. "Early rising," says the doctor, "tends to exhaust the physical powers and to shorten life." Indeed, if you have got the wrong kind of constitution for early rising the practice may carry you off in the flower of youth.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

All contempt is irrational.

When might is master, justice is servant.

Try novelties to a limited extent, and cautiously.

Our deeds are children which will not be disowned.

A mistake is one of the things that should only be made once.

Bad luck is the only kind that comes to people who trust in luck.

A load of sorrow doesn't wear one so much as a swarm of annoyances.

Life is a field of battle where there are more retreats than victories.

Character is the color which runs through the acts of an individual.

At no time was the world wickeder than when it had a profusion of gods.

Some people look as if they were walking around to save funeral expenses.

To know whether there be true worth in a man, ask how he has dealt with his enemy.

The man who thinks the world owes him a living is always in a hurry to levy on the debt.

It has been said that a fool can ask a question that a wise man cannot answer; yet both men may be better for the question.

An action may be so clothed as to change its proper effect upon people; with most of us a sugar-coated vice seems preferable to a pepper-coated virtue.

It must be terribly humiliating to a woman, after she has planned and schemed to get married, to discover that her husband is so mean that she can't live with him.

Increase in Murders.

The race of public executioners is not wholly extinct in Belgium, although the office has been little more than a sinecure for nearly half a century.

The other day the headman of Brussels was borrowed by the headless Bruges to go through with becoming solemnity the exceedingly silly ceremony of nailing to a post a sentence of imprisonment pronounced in default on some petit larcener. Answer almost simultaneously obtained a loan for a similar purpose of the services of "Monsieur de Liege," one Hamel, whose practical acquaintance with the guillotine ceased in 1865.

The disappearance of a condemned convict necessitated the journey of M. Hamel to the banks of the Scheldt, where he gravely performed the same farce as was enacted by his colleague of Brussels in the city of Menling.

Since 1855 no assassin has perished on a Belgian scaffold. Last year's catalogue of crime in Belgium was long and terrible; 1893 is still young, but each week has brought with it some deed of blood.

Within the last few days the Belgian press has chronicled the deaths by deliberate violence of no fewer than five persons, some of them being attended with circumstances of aggravation which beggar description. In view of this state of affairs the Belgian News asks whether this long suspension, amounting almost to abolition, of capital punishment has or has not been for the public good, and suggests that in spite of the great aversion which King Leopold is known to feel to signing a death warrant, the amended Belgian Constitution must deal effectually with a state of things which has insensitively rendered negative and illusive that most salutary clause of the Belgian Penal Code which should, under other circumstances, strike terror into the hearts of evil doers.—St. James Gazette.

How to Catch Rheumatism.

The plan is simple, and is invariably successful when diligently pursued. Clothe as warmly as possible with flannels next the skin, and sealings undermost from November to the beginning of March. Then on the first clear sunny day in March, when the wind is in the north or northeast, take off all outer wraps, mantles, capes, sealings and the like; wear gowns of a light and thin material, and go for a walk in the park or other open and unprotected place. Sit down full in the wind on a convenient seat, and sit for half an hour. Then go home and wake with a successful attack of rheumatism next morning.

If perchance the rheumatism should fail, it is probable that pleurisy or pneumonia may be the reward. But if, by a miracle, neither the one nor the other repays the trouble taken, then go out and repeat the same tactics the next day, and the next, and the next, until success is assured. The recipe is warranted never to fail if persevered in for a sufficient length of time. A plan almost equally good is the one followed by two young ladies last week. They had both had rheumatic fever previously; yet, because the sun happened to shine brightly in at the dining-room window for a few hours, they allowed the fire to go out. They sat without fire the remainder of the day and evening. The following being a bright morning, they did not have the fire lighted at all. They were both extremely surprised when they were attacked by rheumatic pains in all their limbs, and blamed the neighborhood.—London Hospital.

A Lowell Autograph.

Writing to the Newport Evening Post a correspondent says: Among my autographs (collected) is one from the late James Russell Lowell, sent me years ago. I have never seen it in print. It is characteristic and may interest your readers.

"Leave what to do, and what to spare, To the inspiring moment's care— Nor look for payment— But just to wear Unspotted raiment."

—James Russell Lowell.

The Canary Industry.

For more than a century the breeding of canaries has been a thriving industry in parts of Germany. In 1850 the German dealers began to ship the birds to New York, and then to South America and Australia. The profits are small, but the industry is a godsend to the poor, who make the small wooden cages. It is estimated that about 250,000 canary birds are raised every year in Germany. The most important market is the United States, which takes about 100,000 birds per annum. When the birds are shipped to this country they are always accompanied by an attendant. On the return voyage these attendants take American birds and animals to Europe.—New York Sun.

CATARRH IN CHILDREN

For over twenty years my little girl's life was made miserable by a case of Catarrh. The discharge from the nose was large, constant and very offensive. Her eyes became inflamed, the lids swollen and very painful. After trying various remedies, I gave her SSS. The first bottle seemed to SSS. The first bottle seemed to SSS. The first bottle seemed to SSS.

There is no cure for Catarrh in children, but the symptoms soon abated, and in a short time she was cured.
